OUR PURPOSE

Revolutionizing the sexual and gender climate by eliminating barriers and advancing healthy sexuality.

OUR POTENTIAL

Leadership in sexuality research, education, clinical care, and advocacy to promote positive sexual and gender health for all.

This was a historic year! In May, we celebrated the 50-year anniversary of the Program in Human Sexuality with a virtual gala (delayed by a year because of COVID-19). During this celebration, we were able to close our $5M campaign which helped establish the Bean Robinson Chair in Sexual Health, the Pepper Schwartz Professorship in Sexuality and Aging, and the National Center for Gender Spectrum Health. In recognition of our 50-year legacy and continued leadership, PHS reached the status of an institute within the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health. With this honor, we are now the Institute for Sexual and Gender Health.

Despite the challenges of COVID, we had a significant increase in the number of publications and grant activity. Our clinical services continue to transform lives, moving almost exclusively to telehealth. While we continue to offer our premier course in human sexuality, our online certificate program grew and we received approval for a master’s degree program in sexual health. Based on scientific knowledge, we continued to advocate for sexual and gender rights, access to care, and policies which foster sexual and gender health around the world.

While we accomplished all of this with our outstanding faculty, fellows and staff of the Institute, philanthropic support has been critical to maintaining our excellence and investing in critical areas.

With your continued support, we have now established three endowed chairs, one endowed professorship, the National Center for Gender Spectrum Health, and philanthropically funded postdoctoral fellowships. We are committed to providing the leadership needed to advance sexuality research, education, clinical care, and advocacy to promote sexual and gender health for all!

In May of 2021, the Program in Human Sexuality achieved the status of an institute in the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health at the University of Minnesota Medical School. With this elevated status, PHS announced a rebranding and subsequent name change. Debuting with the new name is a symbol intended to highlight ISGH’s multidisciplinary approach to sexual and gender health:

CLINICAL CARE: Develop, provide, and promote evidence-based best clinical care.

RESEARCH: Advancing groundbreaking discovery through bio-psycho-social gender and sexuality research.

EDUCATION: Advancing a nationally and internationally recognized center for sexual and gender health education.

ADVOCACY: Advocating for sex and gender rights.

These elements come together to create the symbol that reflects the work being done at the newly named Institute for Sexual and Gender Health.

RAISED $1.4M IN SUPPORT FOR SEXUAL AND GENDER HEALTH

- 8,881 Patient visits
- 200+ Medical students and residents trained
- 57 Published articles
- 32 Active research projects
- 5 Postdoctoral fellows trained

“This group has been at the forefront of progress on every significant issue regarding sexual and gender health for the past 50 years. The Institute will advance its proud legacy into the next 50 years.”

James Pacala, MD, MS, head of the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health.
The Institute for Sexual and Gender Health has teamed up with the College of Continuing and Professional Studies to offer a Master of Professional Studies in Sexual Health. This program is completely online, and meets the unique needs of aspiring or current sex therapists, sex educators, medical professionals, and others working in related practices. COVID-19 AND SEXUAL BEHAVIORS

In the first known study to use a large national sample to examine sexual behavior six months into the COVID-19 pandemic in the United States, the Institute for Sexual and Gender Health, in collaboration with Baldwin Wallace University and the University of Washington, reports interesting findings.

Researchers noted a decrease in partnered sexual frequency and sexual pleasure, as well as a significant increase in solitary sexual frequency. While casual sex declined sharply at the start of the pandemic, frequency of these behaviors may have rebounded after a few months. Those people who described engaging in casual sex experiences prior to the pandemic reported waiting an average of seven weeks before reengaging in casual sex. Of those who reported experiencing physical or sexual violence in the past 18 months, 28% reported an increase in violence during the pandemic.

Data from another research project, published by Kristen Mark, PhD, MPH, found that people tended to engage in less sex during the pandemic overall, but those who engaged in more sex were actually more adventurous. Specifically, one in five participants reported expanding their sexual repertoire by incorporating new activities. Common additions included sexting, trying new sexual positions, and sharing sexual fantasies.

Being younger, living alone, and feeling stressed and lonely were linked to trying new things. Participants making new additions were three times more likely to report improvements in their sex life. Even in the face of drastic changes to daily life, many adults are adapting their sexual lives in creative ways.

Kristen Mark, PhD, developed a new, bimonthly education series: Sex Science Happy Hour, with world-class answers to the public’s questions about sex.

Each Sex Science Happy Hour, Dr. Mark invites a different expert in the field of sexual health to a local brewery. Taking questions from the audience, Dr. Mark and her invited guest create an engaging experience while bringing the most up-to-date scientific evidence to the public. Read more at: z.umn.edu/SSHH

EDUCATION HIGHLIGHTS
Advancing a nationally and internationally recognized center for sexual and gender health education.

RESEARCH HIGHLIGHTS
Advancing groundbreaking discovery through bio-psycho-social gender and sexuality research.
In partnership with the World Association for Sexual Health (WAS) and the International Planned Parenthood Association, Western Hemisphere Region (IPPF/WHR), the World Health Organization (WHO), and several other international health agencies, the Institute for Sexual and Gender Health led a task force and organized an expert consultation with leading experts from around the world in 2019 to develop a Declaration on Sexual Pleasure. We are proud to announce that the Declaration was approved by the General Assembly on September 11, 2021.

The goal of the Declaration is to promote sexual pleasure as a means of promoting sexual health and sexual rights. There is mounting evidence that sexual pleasure, sexual health, and sexual rights are fundamental to individual health, to international development, and to the wellbeing of all humans. Drawing upon inspiration from definitions of sexual health that emphasize the possibility of sexual pleasure and engaging with recent consensus on the need for sexual rights as fundamental human rights, we argue that now is the time to incorporate sexual pleasure into this vision. Amidst public health priorities, renewal goals of international development, and vast technological change, it is our hope that we can strive to address the importance of pleasure as a key component of sexual health and sexual rights.
ACCOMPLISHMENTS

• Directed Medical School courses in human sexuality (year 1), sexual medicine elective (year 3/4), and LGBT elective (year 3/4). Became the Thread Director for the new Medical School curriculum to ensure sexual health content is prioritized.
• Directed the graduate certificate in human sexuality, increased enrollment by 35%, and created 4 new courses for a new graduate certificate in sex therapy.
• Created the master’s degree in sexual health, approved by the Board of Regents in October 2021, comprised of the stackable human sexuality graduate certificate with the sex therapy graduate certificate.
• Created Sex Science Happy Hour, the inaugural guest was Dan Savage, with a sold-out crowd of over 200 attendees. Upcoming guests feature ISGH post-doctoral fellows, faculty, and the New York Times bestselling author Peggy Orenstein.
• Published 9 peer-reviewed scientific articles, with an additional 12 currently under peer-review.
• Created The Abstinence Project, a web-based community engagement project that exposes the harms of abstinence-only sex education through the art of storytelling.
• Elected into the World Association for Sexual Health’s Advisory Committee.
• Advanced sexual health and rights through collaboration with international health organizations including the World Health Organization.
• Working with the World Association for Sexual Health led an effort to make a Declaration of Sexual Pleasure, which was approved by the General Assembly on September 11, 2021.
• Prepared a technical document supporting the Declaration of Sexual Pleasure and edited a special issue of the International Journal of Sexual Health on this topic.
• Provided infrastructure and faculty support for professional development.
• Provided seed funding for research activities.
• Provided infrastructure support for communications to stakeholders.
• Provided support for philanthropic development.

We recently completed a $5M fundraising campaign to establish the Bean Robinson Chair in Clinical Sexual Health, the Pepper Schwartz Professorship in Sexuality and Aging, and the National Center for Gender Spectrum Health. This would not be possible without a generous leadership gift and matching opportunity from the TAWANI Foundation, founded by philanthropist COL Jennifer N. Pritzker, IL ARNG (Retired).

Prior to COVID-19, we hosted parties from New York to Los Angeles, with special guests such as Jane Fonda, Betty Dodson, and writers from the hit TV show Transparent. These new avenues of growth are directly related to the philanthropic support of people like you!

$5M CAMPAIGN: WE DID IT!
We celebrated 50 years of revolutionizing sexual and gender health with a virtual gala on Thursday, May 20, 2021. Over 400 attendees from around the globe tuned in live to watch engaging host, CBS correspondent (and MN native) Jamie Yuccas, co-hosts Tom Hoch and Mark Addicks, and Institute director Dr. Eli Coleman. Guests were treated to a video performance selection by Tony Award® and GRAMMY Award®-winning actor, singer, director, composer and playwright Billy Porter. During the event, the Institute celebrated the winners of its first award: the 50 Distinguished Sexual and Gender Health Revolutionary award. View the recipients and more information about them on our website.

Video messages congratulating the Institute (then, the Program in Human Sexuality) on its 50th anniversary were shown throughout the night. University of Minnesota President Joan T. Gabel, Medical School Dean Jakub Tolar, MD, PhD, U.S. Senator Amy Klobuchar, and Minnesota Governor Tim Walz are just a few of the people who recognized the Institute’s legacy and leadership.

By the end of the evening, the Institute was able to not only meet, but surpass its fundraising goal of the evening, thanks to the generosity of donors around the world! If you missed this fabulous event, you can watch the recording of it here: umn.edu/BWF2021
Dr. Swagata Banik is dean of graduate studies and research as well as professor of public health and prevention science at Baldwin Wallace University.

Dr. Banik collaborates with Institute director and professor Dr. Eli Coleman concerning research related to sexual behaviors during COVID-19 on their study: The Impact of the COVID-19 Pandemic on Sexual Behaviors: Findings from a National Survey in the United States.

ADVISORY COUNCIL
The Institute for Sexual and Gender Health’s Leadership Council is 22 devoted volunteers who contribute their professional expertise in sexuality and gender and their leadership in advocacy, community activism, and development to support the international, national, and regional work of the Institute. In 2021, the council completed a five-year campaign in support of the Bean Robinson Endowed Chair in Clinical Sexual Health, the National Center for Gender Spectrum Health, and the Pepper Schwartz Endowed Professorship in Sexuality and Aging. This campaign ended with a gala celebrating 50 years since the founding of the Program in Human Sexuality. The council is committed to future directions to support ISGH in continuing ground-breaking research, leadership in clinical care, and excellence in sexual education.

I am honored, as an alum of the University of Minnesota, to serve as the current ISGH Leadership Chair as we welcome a new director and acknowledge the invaluable legacy of Eli Coleman. The Leadership Council will continue to provide counsel, suggestions, and feedback to ISGH leadership and staff while developing relationships with ISGH national and global supporters who support this remarkable institution.
